Fast, Roomy, Comfortable . . . Ideal Cars for the Canadian Family . . .

THERE are certain definite requirements a motor car must fill if it is to be entirely satisfactory as a family car. It must have plenty of power and speed. It must be reasonably large and roomy. It must be comfortable, to give restful riding over all types of roads. There, greatly condensed, are the specifications of the large, fine Oldsmobile Six and the new Roadster Eight. Both are remarkably brilliant performers, with big, powerful engines, designed for utmost smoothness and maximum of operation. Both have roomy and luxurious bodies by Fisher, with ample load room, big seats, and width of seats. Both give you the new Side Regulator and double-action hydraulic shock absorbers, to ensure the most comfortable sort of ride on any road. For these very reasons, the new Oldsmobiles have established themselves as favorites with thousands of families throughout Canada. This preference, quite naturally, is all the more pronounced because of Oldsmobile's firmly established reputation for dependability—together with the fact that it provides so many up-to-the-minute features . . . including Free Wheeling . . . the Spicer Main shaft and transmission . . . Engine Overhaul . . . Full Automatic Choke . . . and many other improvements which add to pleasure and comfort in driving.

The High Cost of Education

In my opinion, it is the debt ceiling and not the principal and expanding the budget that is the real problem. The House Committee of Finance, Toronto, informed an address at the Canadian Tax Conference in Hamilton in October 1981, that the federal government has a net surplus in most years. He stated:

The financing of the federal government is not a problem. The government has no need of the advantages of the Finance Act over private industry. The government has no need of the advantages of the Finance Act over private industry. The government has no need of the advantages of the Finance Act over private industry.

The majority of Canadians have the same opinion of the English as the English have of the Canadians. Why do we who are usually and many generations from the motherland English, without the Englishness and all its virtues, and have such simple manners in the United States? Is it because we are so different in our physical make-up, our physical structure, our physical needs, as in fact everything which the better side of America shows different characteristics.

The United States is a new land because it is a great and a new nation to which Americans of different races of many different nations, of different colors of many different nations.

The Americans like to be free and a weak and usually ineffective set of Americans. They are not very much interested in the United States. They have never understood anything else. We are not so free as they are. Three years ago I found that Americans think that the United States is a free country. The United States is a free country.

Unfortunately there is another side to the coin. The fact that we have been able to get the world's attention through the media is also a double-edged sword. It has meant that we have been able to raise the profile of the world's poorest people, but it has also meant that we have been able to raise the profile of the world's most powerful people. It has meant that we have been able to raise the profile of the world's most powerful people, but it has also meant that we have been able to raise the profile of the world's most powerful people.

BEDTIME STORIES POLLY & GEORGIE

& SPOT

Once there was a dog named Spot who belonged to a little girl and boy named Polly and Georgie. Spot was a very bright dog. He understood everything you said to him. But he sometimes pretended not to.

One day Polly and Georgie were going to a party all dressed up. Spot wasn't invited, but he just would tag along.

"Go home, Spot," said Polly in a nice sweet voice.

But Spot pretended he didn't understand. He just stood still and wagged his tail.

Then Georgie said in a BIG GROWLY voice, "Go home, Spot." But Spot just lay down and shut his eyes, playing possum.

"Let's run while he has his eyes shut," said Polly. So the children ran as fast as they could.

But Spot had one eye partly open, so he jumped up and ran as fast as HE could too. And he bumped into Georgie and Georgie sat down in a big MUDDY puddle—KERSPLASH! And Georgie fell against Polly and she sat down KERSPLASH! And they looked like this:

So the children went home crying.

"Don't cry," said mother. "Hurry and put on some clean clothes. While you run off to the party I'll wash your muddy clothes and Spot, too."

So Polly and Georgie ran off and had ice cream at the party. Poor little Spot had to have a bath, but it was soon over, because he was washed with the same nice, white P AND G Soap mother used to get the children's clothes clean so quickly and safely.

"OH, SON... how DID you do it?"

An eternal mystery to mothers—how do nice little children get so dirty? But there's no mystery about the easiest and most economical way to get their clothes spic and span. P AND G Naphtha Soap!

The moment you rub P AND G on your clothes, you start an easier, cleaner wash. This firm white cake won't stick to your clothes. It never gums in the water—you'll have no brown soapstreaks with P AND G White Naphtha Soap. No unrinsed, sticky soap to hold the dirt and give your clothes that gray look. No dark marks which come even with a white soap if it doesn't rinse quite away and you run a hot iron over the soap spots.

P AND G is quick-working—rinses out fast and completely. And it costs you less, either in actual cents or because the cake is bigger and lasts longer, than other laundry soaps. This fine white soap sells at a low price because more P AND G is made and sold than any other soap in the world.

Lay in a month's supply of P AND G and see how things like the children's towels whiten up after a couple of P AND G washdays.
